Merit-based admission.

ADMISSION CONDITIONS
A Bachelor in Economics, Social Sciences or an equivalent degree in another field, upon completion of 6-30 credits of supplementary courses.

Master’s Programme
THE MASTER IN SOCIO-ECONOMICS

allows students to become well acquainted with concepts and tools enabling them to critically examine interactions between society and the economy, at both the structural and procedural level with a view to optimising these interactions. Students may specialise in development and North-South inequality, population studies or social policy. The programme emphasises the link between theory and practice through research (dissertation) or by putting students’ skills to the test as they move from an academic to professional setting (work placement).

SPECIALISATION OPTIONS:
• Social Policy
• Development and Migration
• Demographics
