MASTER ÈS LETTRES, DISCIPLINE COMPUTER SCIENCE AND HUMANITIES

The Humanities Faculty's Computer Science Unit, which is also linked to the University's Computer Science Centre (CUI), specialises in natural language processing. At the Bachelor's level, classes focus on central aspects of computer science, such as algorithms and data structures, web development, databases, artificial intelligence and new information and communication technologies. The humanities side is brought out through practical work and projects rather than mathematical problems, students look at problems relating to areas such as linguistics and text processing. Students who have completed the Bachelor's in Computer Science for the Humanities can gain entry to the Master's in Computer Science in the Science Faculty and the Master's in Computer Science for the Humanities, which allows students to specialise in natural language processing.
